

Moral Injury Symposium 2026

Auckland, New Zealand.

What happens when someone is forced to act against their values — or feels betrayed by the people, systems or institutions they trusted?

Moral injury describes the deep emotional and psychological wounds that can result. It's an important and often overlooked area of trauma, increasingly recognised across healthcare, defence, emergency services, chaplaincy and other caring professions.

Join us for a practical and thought-provoking symposium exploring what moral injury is, how it affects people, and how we can better recognise and respond to it.

Who is this for? If your work involves supporting people through difficult, traumatic or ethically challenging situations, this day is for you. We especially welcome chaplains, counsellors, psychologists, doctors, nurses, social workers, teachers, community workers, and anyone interested in understanding this developing field.
